Exhibition Games to Highlight Intramurals 2011

The most awaited intramurals is here!

Blue Flames will fire up the baskets. Yellow Stars will light up the nets. Red hearts will palpitate in the soccer games. Green Laurels will turn greener in chess. These are only some of the possible outcomes on the SSIS Intramurals slated on October 19-21, 2010.

To build up excitement and awaken the athlete’s competitive spirit, there will be basketball exhibition games between SSIS Batangas and the SSIS Alumni Varsity, SSIS Lipa and Southville International School and Colleges (SISC).

On the launching day, there will be a torch parade to be led by the captain balls of the team. It will be followed by the preliminaries such as national anthem, singing of the hymn and invocation to be led by the Student Council Officers. The principal, Ms. Donnabelle U. Lingao will welcome the students, parents and guests to the event. The Upper School SC President, Antonio Adrian Julian M. Pastor will lead the Oath of Sportsmanship to remind the students of their responsibilities as athletes. This will be followed by cheering presentations from each team, a dance number from the NKP, Dance Club and the Dance Varsity, presentation and selection of Mr. and Ms. Intramurals, and the exhibition game between SSIS Batangas and SSIS Alumni Varsity. Then the real games will begin.

The Preschool Department will join in the kick-off ceremony. After that, they will play games specifically designed for them.

On the second day, spectators will witness the exhibition games between SSIS Batangas and SSIS Lipa; then the games will continue. There will be four teams competing in different outdoor and indoor sports – basketball, volleyball, soccer, badminton, sack race, chess, scrabble and games of the general.

The exhibition game between SSIS Batangas and SISC will take place on the third day. If all the games are completed within two days, the awarding of winners will immediately follow.

Intramurals are held every year to foster unity and harmonious relationship among the SSIS community, to imbibe in students the spirit of sportsmanship and cooperation and to develop sports and fitness consciousness among the students.

What’s in a name?

Blue Flames
Yellow Stars
Red Hearts
Green Laurels

The team names are the symbols appearing on the logo of SSIS, a reflection of the institution’s mission to be a giver of light and knowledge, to achieve excellence, and to provide a learning environment born out of compassion.

Make sure you have an audience.

Make sure that you have an audience before you start speaking. Since children – and many adults – can concentrate on only one thing at a time, call the child’s name, this allows time for all eyes to focus on you before you begin speaking. This saves time, frustration, and repetition for all parties.

Examples:
“Jill.” (Wait until she stops playing in the sand and looks at you.) “You have ten more minutes to play outside”.
“Jack.” (Wait until he stops throwing the ball and look at you.) “Dinner will be ready in fifteen minutes.”

Keep your request simple.

Young children do their best when they carry out one order at a time. They have a hard time remembering a series of requests, so the adults who communicate best with them are the ones who keep their requests simple.

Three year-old Sarah would be confused if you tell her, “Go to your room and hand up your clothes, but first, pick up your toys and put out the dog.” Both Sarah and the dog might disappear because “put out the dog” is all Sarah remembers.

Instead, separate your requests. Ask Sarah to pick up her toys. When the task is completed, ask her to put out the dog. When the dog is out and Sarah is still in, ask her to hang the clothes in her room.
