Southville Cares: High School Students Organize Outreach Programs for Local Preschoolers

Southville International School and Colleges' (SISC) commitment to fostering social responsibility extends beyond its classrooms. Recently, student organizations from the High School and Senior High School departments joined forces to organize the Prosperity Outreach for Unprivileged Children (P.O.U.Ch) initiative.

This heartwarming project aimed to provide support and spread joy to preschoolers from CAA Elementary School and Daniel Fajardo Elementary School. Led by groups like the Red Cross Youth (RCY), Youth Enthusiast Society (YES) Club, SISC English Club (SEC), Kindness Program, and the Student Council, the outreach program offered a day of fun and learning for the young participants.

Held on March 18th for the High School Division and April 8th for the Senior High School Division at Luxembourg Hall, the P.O.U.Ch program saw student volunteers interacting with the preschoolers through engaging activities and games. In a spirit of camaraderie, both the volunteers and the children enjoyed a delicious meal together.

But the impact of P.O.U.Ch went beyond mere entertainment. The Southville students came prepared, bearing gifts of school supplies, food, and books. These essential donations will undoubtedly empower the preschoolers in their educational journeys.

The P.O.U.Ch initiative serves as a shining example of the dedication and compassion that thrives within the Southville student body. By giving their time, energy, and resources, these young leaders have made a positive and lasting impact on the lives of underprivileged children in their community.

“

When I was attending SISC, I was motivated by the school's vast, well invested curriculum that emphasized in academics and values. Unique subjects such as Entrepreneurship and Home Economics allowed me to challenge myself, be creative, and think outside the box. Events such as International Week and the Comprehensive Growth Series were not only fun, but taught me more about self respect and respect to others. On top of that, SISC had passionate faculty who inspired me to go above and beyond. That foundation enabled me to attend and graduate from one of the toughest academies in the world, West Point. I am currently an officer in the U.S. Army, and it's a tough job that brings a new agenda, everyday. My ability to adapt to new situations and environments was strengthened at SISC. In addition, the Army is a "people" organization. I'm a leader, on and off duty. That's what SISC developed me to be: to lead with integrity and set a good example. The 5 C's are what I live by and enforce. It's a motto that aligns with the Army Values, as well as mine.

Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) Corner

TEACHING CHILDREN ABOUT PERSONAL ACCOUNTABILITY

Let your kids know their responsibilities.

To ensure there's no confusion, sit down with your child and make a list of their responsibilities.

Be consistent.

When teaching accountability, consistently integrate it into your child's behavior and routine.

Give children age-appropriate chores.

This is associated with social, emotional and academic benefits and makes children more self-reliant.

Show children how to change their behavior.

Teaching children personal responsibility is not about punishing or disciplining them – it's about teaching them to make amends for intentional or unintentional behavior.

Set an example.

The best way to teach children about personal accountability is by being accountable yourself.
